In the corner of a quiet street,
Where laughter and coffee gently meet,
The bistro hums with a subtle grace,
A cosy, warm, inviting space.

Tables kissed by the evening light,
Candles flicker, soft and bright,
The air is rich with stories told,
Of hearts grown young, of souls grown bold.

In the heart of the city,
where the lights softly glow,
A bistro awaits, where stories flow.

With plates of delight and cups filled with cheer,
It's a place where hearts gather, year after year.
The aroma of spices, the clink of the glass,
A moment suspended, where time doesn't pass.

Laughter and whispers weave through the air,
As the warmth of the kitchen pulls up a chair.
